Indian Summer Camp

Our week-long camp lets kids with cancer build friendships and focus on the important things in life – arts and crafts, swimming, hiking and s'mores. Nurses, trained volunteers, and a staff doctor are on hand to ensure every camper's safety. A day camp option allows younger kids to be part of the fun as well.

At Indian Summer Sibling Camp, brothers and sister of kids with cancer get the chance to meet peers in a similar situation while enjoying some special fun and receiving attention that's all their own.

Camp Freedom

Camp Freedom is an action packed weekend designed to help campers age 10 years and older with an intellectual, developmental or physical disability experience summer camp in a way they most enjoy. With a large team of trained volunteers and a low camper to volunteer ratio, campers engage in exciting outdoor activities including archery, fishing, bonfires and swimming in the pool and lake. Campers will also spend time growing in faith and worship. Camp Freedom is a unique weekend where volunteers encourage each camper to learn, play and try something new.
