

Angela Dominguez

“Serve students, community, staff, and the board to provide every student with the educational background and experiences to be successful in life”

Dominguez serves as the assistant superintendent of academic services in Edgewood Independent School District in San Antonio, Texas – a large, urban district of about 10,000 students. Previously, she served as the district’s chief of secondary schools and executive director of school leadership.

She is making great strides in providing equitable opportunities for scholars of Edgewood, a high-poverty district. Accomplishments across her 26-year career include collaboration with external partners (e.g., Texas A&M, Texas Council for International Studies, and others) to create unique learning opportunities for Edgewood students, improved academic accountability from a D grade to a C, selection as a Principal of the Year semifinalist by a Texas-based corporation, and recognition as the Bilingual Administrator of the Year by a local chapter of bilingual educators.

Dominguez obtained her Bachelor of Arts in history from Dartmouth College and her Master of Science in educational administration from Texas A&M University - Kingsville. She is currently in the Cooperative Superintendency Program at the University of Texas at Austin, where she is in the research phase of her dissertation on how to retain high-quality principals in high-poverty, urban schools.
